Youngsters try their hand at new age kurling as part of Hackney Schools Sports Championships

THE forthcoming Paralympics was the inspiration for the fourth annual Hackney Schools Sports Championships this month.

Over 2,500 youngsters took part in the event, from 7 to 14 October, competing in a wide range of disability sports including wheelchair basketball, archery and goalball. Lord Coe, chair of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, said the Paralympics will be 'a real opportunity to help change people's perceptions about disability and also inspire people to get into disability sport'. For more, turn to pages 8-9.

BEAT THE RUSH

RESIDENTS will have 48 hours advance notice to buy tickets for three world class sporting events at Olympic venues next year.

The best international gymnasts, cyclists and high divers will battle it out in three test events for the London 2012 Games, to will decide whether they get a shot at Olympic glory.

Residents can use a unique code – HACKNEYPREPARES – to purchase tickets to each event 48 hours in advance of general release.

The first, International Gymnastics, runs from 10 to 18 January at the North Greenwich Arena (also known as the O2). It will be the last opportunity to qualify for London 2012 and will feature some of the world's best gymnasts from 60 nations.

The UCI Track Cycling World Cup at the Olympic Park Velodrome from 17 to 19 February will feature the best riders from around the world.

And the FINA Diving World Cup from 20 to 26 February will be the first major sporting event at the Olympic Park Aquatics Centre and the last opportunity for divers from 50 nations to qualify for London 2012.

Early booking for these tickets will begin online through Ticketmaster, from 8am on 15 November, to 9am on 17 November at: www.ticketmaster.co.uk/londonpreparesseries.

Tickets will be allocated on a first come first served basis. They go on general sale from

The cinema's state-of-the-art screens were a perfect showcase for an exclusive opening night preview of a George Clooney film

Cinema opens

THE countdown is complete: the borough's newest cinema is now open.

Hackney Picturehouse is a four-screen cinema offering a selection of mainstream and independent films, three bars and a live music venue.

With 600 reclining seats, digital and satellite technology for live screenings, a street level café, workspaces, outreach programmes and events such as film quizzes and open mic nights, the venue is hoping to attract all audiences.

London Fields resident Michael Fassbender, star of 'X:Men First Class' and 'Jane Eyre', threw his support behind the Hackney cinema when he spoke at its launch event on 27 October.

In addition, its first guests were treated to what was only the third-ever screening of comedy-drama

The Hackney Picturehouse returns the former Ocean venue to use

'The Descendants', directed by 'Sideways' auteur Alexander Payne and starring George Clooney.

Speaking at the launch, Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "This a fantastic, exciting venture. I'd like to thank everyone who helped make this happen. And thanks Picturehouse for putting a cinema back on Mare Street."

"I would like to thank everyone at the Council who has worked very hard to connect us with people who can make things happen."

Lyn Goleby, managing director of Picturehouse operator City Screen, added: "There is fantastic support for film in the area. I would like to thank everyone at the Council who has worked very hard to connect us with people who can make things happen. And to all our backers, we have built it and they will come."

Around 1,500 people had signed up as a member of Hackney Picturehouse before its official opening on 28 October.

Located opposite Hackney Town Hall, the cinema transforms the former Ocean venue.

Cast members from controversial C4 drama 'Top Boy', set in Hackney and due to be screened from 31 October

A PROJECT aimed at tackling gang crime in Hackney has come under the spotlight, as a result of controversial TV drama Top Boy, a fictionalised account of gang life set in the borough.

The Integrated Gangs Intervention Project (IGIP), formed last July by the Council, local police and other agencies, has already had considerable success in reducing gang-related crime.

Initial evaluation of the project after six months showed a reduction in gang violence of 59 per cent, gang-related knife crime fell by 68 per cent, and gang-related gun crime fell by 67 per cent.

The initiative brings together a number of existing projects, and works with people of all ages to help them exit gangs. Where this fails, and people refuse to move away from the gang lifestyle, the team makes sure that swift action is taken by police.

Every aspect of gang crime is tackled through

“The project has seen a significant drop in gang-related violent crime, but we know we have to continue this work”

the project, including identifying and working with young people at risk of getting involved with gangs, and re-housing those wanting to exit gangs and start afresh.

Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Sophie Linden, explained the approach as ‘tailored to local needs, using years of local expertise from the police, youth service, and community groups.’

She added: “There has been successful anti-gang work in Hackney for some time, but bringing it all together has made it even more effective. The project has seen a significant drop in gang-related violent crime, but we know we have to continue this work to bring about lasting change.”

The Council has also worked closely with police to co-fund operations aimed specifically at gang activity. This work has led directly to a number of arrests and successful convictions. (See fact file)

Cllr Linden said: “These operations are vital to support the police in taking action against gangs, and the Council supports these both financially and operationally. Alongside this work, we are working hard to support individuals and families affected by gangs.”

FACT FILE

- Total number of young people in Hackney on youth justice orders has dropped from 649 in 2007/08 to 340 in 2010/11
- Operation Chalais: A ground-breaking operation, which took place over 18 months and came to an end in August, has led to 41 people being charged with 217 offences including firearms and drug-related crimes
- Operation Marsican: A three month operation targeting street drug dealers, which resulted in 20 people being arrested and charged with over 80 offences
- A two year joint operation between the Met’s Operation Trident, Hackney Police and the Council resulted in the seizure of 29 firearms, 221 rounds of ammunition, and 137 kilos of Class A and 20 kilos of Class B drugs with an estimated street value of £6.5million. Fifty-five criminals were successfully prosecuted and are now serving a total of 389 years in prison.

Message from the Mayor

Gang drama

C4 drama Top Boy has put the issue of gang crime in Hackney back into the headlines.

Some residents have already expressed concern that it might paint an excessively negative picture of the borough, potentially damaging businesses that rely on customers visiting from across London, such as the restaurants and theatres. Some also fear it may portray damaging racial stereotypes.

Whatever people think of the programme, it is important that residents feel confident that the Council and police are working together to tackle the issue of gang crime. In Hackney, we know that this kind of organised crime is carried out by a tiny minority of people. However, the activities of these few people have a disproportionately high impact on the communities that live here.

Violent and drug-related gang crime has a high profile and makes people feel less safe in their neighbourhoods. Our residents identify it as one of their top concerns. That is why we are determined to tackle this problem through every means at our disposal. We have been developing strategies for some years that look specifically at the way gangs operate in Hackney, and tackle those issues head-on.

These have come together in the Integrated Gangs Intervention Project (IGIP) which addresses every aspect of gang crime in Hackney; from co-funding police operations to supporting families and re-housing witnesses.

Gangs involve people of all ages but, in the long-term the only way to put a stop to gang crime is to effectively cut off the supply of young people who are vulnerable to being recruited into gangs by older members.

We need to ensure that all our young people have higher aspirations, and access to the support they need to reach their full potential. Education has a huge part to play in this, and the significant improvements in Hackney’s school standards are transforming the life chances of Hackney children.

It’s a real challenge in the current climate, but creating new jobs and apprenticeships, and making sure our young people have the skills they need to do them will also be vitally important.

In the meantime, our efforts to tackle gangs will continue to strike a balance between cracking down on hardened offenders, and supporting those who want to get away from the gang lifestyle.

We are committed to funding and supporting this work into the future, despite the financial challenges that all councils are facing.

Relay the dream

YOUNGSTERS from four Hackney primary schools took part in an Olympic-themed relay across London's 33 boroughs to celebrate International Walk to School Month.

The 47 students helped carry Olympic torches from the 1948 London and 1956 Melbourne games across Hackney, before handing them over to pupils in neighbouring Tower Hamlets at the borough boundary in Victoria Park.

The event also supported national campaign WoW, which encourages schoolchildren to earn highly collectable pin badges each month by walking to school at least once a week.

Hackney police officers and Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, joined the parade on 14 October.

Cllr Demirci said: "I'm delighted that children across Hackney can get involved in the exciting range of Olympic-themed activities taking place in the borough in the run-up to next year's Olympic and Paralympic Games, while learning about the many benefits of walking as part of an active lifestyle for the future."

She added: "Walking is a fun and healthy way to travel to and from school that can also help reduce traffic congestion and save time for parents."

Currently, 81 per cent of Hackney children live within one mile of their school, yet only 67 per cent walk or cycle there. A Council programme to help boost the numbers of children walking to school in the borough has seen an 11 per cent increase since 2007/08.

Elly Barnes from Stoke Newington School has topped this year's Pink List

Teacher tops list

A Stoke Newington teacher has been named the most influential person in the UK's lesbian, gay, transgender and bisexual (LGBT) community.

Message through music

Climbing above famous names from pop star Jessie J to campaigning MP Simon Hughes, Elly Barnes made number one in The Pink List, a national poll compiled by The Independent on Sunday newspaper.

Dozens e-mailed the paper to nominate Elly as an unsung hero in her local community for her pioneering work tackling homophobia in schools.

Elly has been teaching music at the school for more than 12 years and is now “Elly's work ensures people are not afraid of being who they are”

its leader on promoting equalities. She also co-ordinates the school's LGBT History Month events every February.

Elly said she was 'gobsmacked' to hear the news. She added: "It was the first time I'd ever been on the list. I was just hoping to get in at 100."

Annie Gammon, headteacher at the school, added: "It is still all too common, for instance, for people in public life to seek to hide their sexuality."

"This type of secrecy should not need to happen, and Elly's work ensures people are not afraid of being who they are."

News in brief

FARM:shop in Dalston Lane

Down on the farm

A COMMUNITY-led, urban farming project supported by the Council is flourishing as a business just over a year after opening.

FARM:shop on Dalston Lane is home to fish farms, rooftop chicken coops, an indoor allotment and a community cafe dishing up its own produce.

Visitors to the shop can learn about sustainable farming techniques as well as enjoy community events, live music and talks.

The store was set up by Something & Son, a design practice that combines art, engineering and business to develop creative ways to promote sustainability.

Site includes indoor allotments

The project has proved popular and a three-year lease has now been signed on the property.

Founder Paul Smyth said: "For us it was vital that we got the balance right. We wanted to create an educational, community initiative through something positive."

The project has employed one full-time member of staff, who was initially supported through the Future Jobs Fund, and has additional help from 10 regular volunteers.

FARM:shop is one of several projects that has benefited from Hackney Council's Art in Empty Spaces initiative, designed to transform empty properties into something useful and meaningful for residents and visitors.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, added Art in Empty Spaces 'has shown the breadth of innovation that is found across Hackney's economy'. For more info, visit: www.farmlondon.weebly.com

Supermarket sweep

THE shopkeeper who saw his store devastated by looters during the August riots has won the Independent Community Retailer of the Year award.

Siva Kandiah won the trophy at the National Federation of Retail Newsagents' awards show hosted by TV presenter Anita Rani on 18 October. His Clarence Road shop was wrecked after rioters stole stock and attempted to set fire to the premises. Without contents insurance, his business was almost destroyed, but thanks to support from the Council and an appeal fund set up by residents that raised more than £30,000, Siva was able to carry on trading. Judges at the NFRN were impressed by the loyalty shown by his customers, and presented the award for Siva's consistent and committed contribution to the community.

The grand tour

A COUNCIL cycling project took a group of young people on a tour of some of East London's most renowned landmarks: from the eerie undergrowth of Abney Park cemetery to the sheen of the Olympic Park.

The programme saw 11 to 19-year-olds bike across the borough to discover more about its history and get pointers on safe cycling. The young people took part in a training day before the trip on 27 October. This included practising manoeuvres like indicating and emergency stops.

Hackney Society historian Mary Sewell (right) then worked with the young people to map out a route for a sightseeing tour. The group of 20 young people were shown around the borough, hearing the history of locations like Victoria Park, Hackney's first mosque in Stoke Newington and Middlesex filter beds in the Lea Valley. Newer attractions such as the Anish Kapoor's 110metre Olympic Park artwork were also taken in as part of the trip. The six-hour tour ended with a speed cycle back to Hackney.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This was an exciting opportunity for young people to learn about being safe cyclists while discovering some fascinating facts about Hackney's history."

MORE than 2,500 youngsters took part in the fourth Hackney Schools Sports Championships (HSSC), an inclusive competition inspired by the Paralympic Games.

Teams from all six 2012

host boroughs battled it out from 7 to 14 October in a wide range of disability sports, including wheelchair basketball, archery and goalball.

And this year youngsters who attend the borough's children centres were also invited to try their hand at the sports, enabling under-fours to get in on the act for the first time.

Many older students had already sampled

Paralympic sports at school, as part of work to ensure the borough's PE lessons include all pupils, regardless of ability.

Randal Cremer pupil Taciana said: "When you play Paralympic sports it's a chance to join in and see how people with disabilities feel."

Stoke Newington School pupil Owen, who tried wheelchair basketball, added: "It's fun to crash and it's quite energetic. You have to put all the power into your arms."

Local Paralympian Dervis Konuralp and members of the Team GB wheelchair basketball squad were on hand to give coaching advice during the championships.

Different activities took place on three N16 sites: Clissold Leisure Centre; Stoke Newington School; and West Reservoir Centre.

Pupils also got a taste of visually impaired football at Grasmere Primary School, N16, facilitated by coaches from Arsenal, Chelsea and Tottenham.

A hub for the sport is being set up at Stoke Newington School by the Football Association in partnership with HSSC organiser The Learning Trust. Stormont House School and Grasmere primary were the overall championship winners.

Lord Coe, chair of the London Organising Committee of the Olympic Games and Paralympic Games, said: “I’m delighted that young people have the chance to try a Paralympic sport and get a taster for the excitement they will witness during the Paralympic Games next year.

“They are a real opportunity to help change people’s perceptions about disability and also inspire people to get into disability sport.”

Steve Belk, acting chief executive of The Learning Trust, added: “It’s vital we take every opportunity to inspire young people with the spirit of the Games and show that anyone can take part in sport, whatever their ability.”

The weighting game

Olympian George Manners outside Cardinal Pole School where he coaches its successful weightlifting team

GEORGE Manners has many claims to fame, from taking part in the Olympics to coaching the Cardinal Pole school weightlifting team to success after success. But the strangest must be lifting Dame Diana Rigg above his head for a photoshoot.

The 73-year-old has found himself back in the limelight recently after being nominated alongside his students in three categories at this year's Hackney Sports Awards.

George has been recognised for guiding pupils from absolute beginners to weightlifting champs. Not shy of a few medals himself, George won two silvers and a bronze at three Commonwealth Games, as well as competing in the 1964 Tokyo Olympics.

George moved from the West Indies to Hackney, aged 19, in search of work. The English climate proved too cold to pursue his favourite sport of cricket however, so he took up weightlifting instead. His talent was quickly spotted by one of the instructors.

"He said 'carry on like that and you'll be competing nationally within a year or two'.

That same year I won the London Weightlifting Championships and came second in the British Championships," he recalls.

He would train three evenings a week, while in a full-time job, and by 1960, was set to compete at the Olympics in Rome. Just before the competition he suffered a devastating injury. While working on machine at a ply wood factory in Well Street, his arm got caught in the mechanics and he almost had to have it amputated. However, after an 18 month rehabilitation programme, George emerged more motivated and fitter than ever before.

He said: "I upped my training programme from three to five days a week and was determined to make it to the 1964

Olympics in Tokyo, and I did. Competing alongside the very best in the world was an incredible experience. After the event I got to eat breakfast with the Queen and I was asked to lift Diana Rigg (of Avengers fame) above my head for a photoshoot."

1966 was a pinnacle year for George. He entered a qualifier for the Commonwealth Games in Jamaica, and over confident, failed all of his lifts. Remarkably George was still invited to compete if he would lift in a heavier category. Determined to make it, he took six weeks off work to train full-time and won a silver medal.

"I was delighted," he said. "At that moment I learned that anything can happen. Believe in yourself, work hard, but always remain realistic."

George retired from competing in 1975 and went on to become a full-time coach. In 2006, Shaun Purcell, Head of PE at Cardinal Pole, persuaded him to run an out-of-hours weightlifting class. George remains at the school today.

He said: "Spotting and nurturing talent is what motivates me. It's important that young people have aspirations and the support of role models to help them achieve their goals."

George has been nominated for Coach of the Year at the Hackney Sports Awards, a title he won last year. The winners will be revealed at a Hackney Empire ceremony on 2 November.

"I've been so lucky to have travelled the world doing what I love the most. People always ask 'if you could do it all again would you change anything?' But I wouldn't change a thing."

All your recycling questions answered

Q: AFTER the hot autumn weather my front garden has started piling up with leaves. It feels like a waste to put them in the rubbish bin, is there any way I can recycle them?

A: Residents can either compost autumn leaves in their gardens or take advantage of the Council's brown bin garden waste collection.

Composting leaves is as easy as putting them in a bin bag, making holes in the bag, and storing them in a corner of the garden where you can forget about them for 12 months. These leaves will become a rich nutrient – leaf mulch – which can be used to fertilise your garden.

If you have too many leaves or would like them to be collected by the Council's free fortnightly garden waste service, please call the Hackney Recycling Hotline on: 020 8356 6688.

Traditional English apple varieties are experiencing a revival

Jayden Patrick Philip, four, taking part in a National Apple Day event at Sutton House, Homerton

An apple a day

SUTTON House has received £5,000 worth of funding to set up an apple orchard in its new garden.

The cash will support growing local varieties of apples and it is hoped residents and community groups will sign up to plant and maintain the urban orchard in Homerton.

Fruit juice firm Copella donated the money as part of its campaign to increase English apple numbers.

To celebrate the news, as well as National Apple Day, Sutton House staff held a family day at the 500-year-old building. The 20 October event saw visitors plant trees for the new orchard, learn horticulture tips and create a family tree.

Christopher Cleeve, Learning Officer at Sutton House, said: "It's exciting to have some of our local varieties coming back to the area and it will really put us on the map as somewhere locals can come to learn more and have a great day out with the family.”

On 15 October, Stoke Newington Farmers' Market also held its own celebration for National Apple Day. At its St Paul's Church home there was a chance to press apples, go apple bobbing and sample some of the oldest UK apple varieties.

YOUNG and old gave more than 1,100 hours of their free time to help maintain Hackney's award-winning green spaces in September.

The Council hosted 75 hours of volunteer sessions for residents aged five to 75, which ranged from creating bird boxes to helping out with a wildlife programme in Springfield Park.

Members of the borough's park user groups also planted bulbs at Haggerston Park, and helped to run Stoke Newington Fun Day.

Eugene Clerkin, from the Tree Musketeers, said: "Planting, preserving and protecting trees in parks is most enjoyable as it is good, physical hard work and it is a responsibility that links you to your own local environment and to others."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, added: "Hackney's award winning

News in brief

Make energy while the sun shines

THE first solar panels to be installed on a borough estate are now helping residents reduce their energy bills and have a positive impact on the environment. Panels have been fitted at Linslade House in Haggerston to generate power for the 50 properties in the block. Using solar electricity cuts energy bills and carbon emissions. Linslade residents will be able to see their savings via a monitor in the communal area of the block and a reduction in their bills is forecast within months.

Whiston Road residents and the local tenants and residents association were closely involved in the project.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Housing, said: "This marks the beginning of a green programme on estates right across the borough which will also include replacement of thousands of boilers to new energy efficient models."

Day of the Dead

7 November, 7-10pm, The Book Club, 100-106 Leonard Street, EC2A 4ZH

Mexico's most famous holiday, Day of the Dead, comes to The Book Club. Halloween typically evokes the fear of death. 'El día de la muerte' as the Mexican party is known in Spanish, celebrates death, or more specifically life by sharing comical stories of departed loved ones. Its history dates to the Aztec era, when a month-long celebration was presided by the goddess Mictecacihuatl, the Lady of the Dead and ruler of the underworld. Guests in Hackney will be invited to have their face decorated, and to bring a photo of a loved one to contribute to an altar made of bread, along with Mexican hot chocolate, alcohol and flowers.

More importantly, visitors can also tell and hear of crazy stories of family and friends who have passed on.

As well as learning about this celebration, they'll be prizes for Spanish sayings learnt on the night as well as the screening of animation 'Hasta Los Huesos'.

"If the Grim Reaper was Mexican, he wouldn't be so downbeat; he would knock at your door with a massive grin, bottle in hand and lively music," say organisers. Though at the Grim Reaper's age – his name was first used 500 years ago – drinks go right through him. That and being made mostly of bones.

Shalom Baby

Stratford East, Gerry Raffles Square, Stratford, London E15 1BN

Little has been documented about the black victims of the Holocaust, nor those who survived its devastation.

Award-winning British writer and director Rikki Beadle Blair, became aware of this gap in the historical record while working on a play about the Second World War and has woven their legacy into a new production which investigates themes of racism, sexuality and family.

Set between 1930s Berlin and present-day Brooklyn, 'Shalom Baby' is a comic love story that depicts the relationship between a wealthy young Jewish woman and her family's black 'Shabbes Goy' – a term used for non-Jewish assistants in religious ceremonies.

Beadle Blair was recently named one the 100 most influential LGBT people in Britain in the Independent on Sunday's Pink List and is well known for his art as well as his activism around issues of homophobia and sex education. In this vein, Shalom Baby combines social commentary, humour and melodrama in a work which seeks to challenge as well as entertain his audience. Tickets start at £10.

The careers fair at Skinners' Academy will provide advice on work opportunities & higher education

VIRGIN and the BBC are among the big-name firms lined up to give job advice at this year's Career Awareness Fair.

The event, held at Skinners' Academy, will offer 15 to 19-year-olds information on the work opportunities available after further education. Teachers and career advisors are also encouraged to attend.

Visitors will be able to speak directly to professionals from more than 25 companies to find out what steps are needed to get into fields including science, creative industries, technology, engineering, financial services and education.

As well as local firms, such as Graeae Theatre and Hackney Empire, guest speakers Gavin Ramjaun from ITV's Daybreak and Harriet Prest from Sky News, will also be on hand to give advice.

Plus representatives from universities, including Oxford and Cambridge are set to speak about higher education.

It is hoped the fair will give students more confidence about future employment prospects.

Eyes Wide Open: the Careers Awareness Fair is on 3 November, 3-8pm, at Skinners' Academy, Woodberry Grove, N4. Places are limited.

First step to building career

THIRTY-eight people have been recruited as construction apprentices this year, thanks to an initiative developed by the Council.

The Sustainable Training Employment Pathway (STEP) creates employment and training opportunities for residents on building projects worth more than £3million.

The scheme trains and places successful applicants in long-term employment, with an apprenticeship lasting two years.

Unsuccessful candidates are given advice to help their development, including finding college courses.

STEP aims to recruit a further 150 apprentices by the end of 2012. Furthermore, planned developments in the borough, worth £1.3billion over the next five to six years, could translate into employment for up to 800 apprentices across the sector locally.

Syma Khatun, 34, was one of the scheme's first

recruits and is working as a junior plumber with a construction company. She said: "I used to work in retail, but I always loved DIY. STEP has helped me to gain the practical training and confidence I needed in order to make a career doing something I love."

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games, added: "The feedback from employers and apprentices has been very positive and we believe it is a model that will continue to give many more local people that step-up to a career within the construction industry."

News in brief

Soap star helps celebrate black heritage

EASTENDERS star Rudolph Walker (pictured) helped The Urswick School celebrate Black History Month when he dropped into its new drama studio. The actor, who plays Patrick Trueman in the long-running BBC soap, spoke to students about his upbringing in Trinidad and being one of the first black actors on UK television.

Rudolph also congratulated the school on its GCSE drama results.

He said: "A career as an actor can be very demanding, but it is also incredibly creative and exciting. It's good to see that students at The Urswick School enjoy the subject so much."

Head of Drama Sarah Conway added: "It's been great for the students to speak to a professional actor and to learn about some of the difficulties black actors faced in the 1960s and 1970s, while trying to get their 'big break'." Throughout October, students took part in many Black History Month themed sessions: from learning about the slave trade to exploring ancient Egyptian artwork. The Urswick School, formerly Hackney Free & Parochial School, re-opened in September following the completion of a £17million Building Schools For the Future project.

Regulator invites parents to rate their child's school

OFSTED has launched a new online questionnaire to allow parents and carers to rate their child's school. Parent View is a 12-question survey covering issues such as levels of homework, bullying and the quality of teaching.

The survey was set up to help parents make informed choices about their child's education, as well as provide the education watchdog with information to help set priorities for its school inspections.

Measures such as a registration process and monitoring systems have been put in place to limit site misuse and ensure schools are treated fairly. In addition, the survey does not allow free text comments instead inviting responses through a series of closed questions.

Hackney's young musicians have been praised by the Duchess of Kent

Playing our tune

HER Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent has praised the borough's young musicians on national TV.

Speaking on ITV's 'The Alan Titchmarsh Show', she said: "The Learning Trust in Hackney recognised that rhythm is the most unifying language amongst the 40 to 50 languages spoken there."

"You will find the most wonderful Samba bands

[in the borough] and I'd like to see some of them perform at the opening of the Olympics."

The samba band had played for the Duchess, who is the first cousin of the Queen, at Tate Modern.

Bridge Academy student Terence Telfer, who started playing samba at London Fields primary school, said: "I worked my way up to being part of the Hackney Bateria and this gave me the chance to play for the Duchess of Kent and in the finals of the Music for Youth festival. We also played in the City of London Festival parade. It's just the best thing ever."

Currently, youngsters are gearing up for The Learning Trust's second gala concert.

Over 200 schoolchildren will perform a diverse repertoire at the concert, from orchestral symphonies to jazz improvisation.

The event will feature some of the most gifted musical pupils in the borough as well as former students now studying at music college.

The show takes place on 10 November at 6.30pm. Tickets are available from the Hackney Empire.

NEWS IN BRIEF

Hackney's new homework club

A FREE homework club to support the borough's young people has been launched by a 22-year-old from Shoreditch.

Dileta Senkyire came up with the idea after being selected as a regional representative for the 'Changemaker' national youth leadership project.

She secured £3,000 in funding to set up her pilot project, Hackney's Homework Club, and recruited ten of the borough's top-flight graduates and undergraduates to tutor 11 to 16-year-olds looking for additional support with English, Maths and Science. Sessions will be run at a new state-of-the-art youth hub in Stoke Newington, which was recently refurbished thanks to Myplace funding granted under the last Government.

Dileta said: "I wanted to develop a project that showed that young people who have excelled in education in Hackney, can care enough to re-invest in future generations by offering their time, skills and knowledge on a voluntary basis." Sessions are set to run every Wednesday, from 4-6pm, from 2 November onwards – for a limited period only – at Stoke Newington Young People's Centre, Chaucer Court, Shakespeare Walk, N16.

To book call Dileta on: 07877 168 807, e-mail: dsenkyire@hotmail.com; or call Mandy on: 020 8356 5433, or e-mail: mandy.richards@hackney.gov.uk

Local democracy in action

NEARLY 50 young people from borough schools attended a question and answer session with the Mayor of Hackney and a panel of high-profile guests as part of Local Democracy Week. Those facing questions on 12 October included key decision-makers from the Met Police, The Learning Trust, the Council's 2012 team, and representatives from Hackney Youth Parliament. The panel was asked about topics including the economic downturn, youth employment opportunities, the end of the Education Maintenance Allowance, and opportunities for young people to get engaged in the political process.

Young people also took part in a forum that looked at the causes of the summer's riots, and had the opportunity to propose solutions to underlying issues that may have been catalysts. Jesse Williams, one of two Hackney Youth Parliament members on the panel, said: "If you want to get more involved in local politics, you can. As a member of the youth parliament I go to scrutiny meetings and work with councillors to review what the Council is doing, so we are being listened to." Ashley Brooks, who will be supporting the local patient champion trial, welcomes the opportunity to get positive feedback

Championing the NHS

CHAMPIONS are being sought to promote the NHS as part of a new project to help improve health services.

The borough's health trust is looking for volunteers who are passionate about their local NHS and willing to speak out on behalf of others. The feedback these Local Patient Champions (LPCs) collect would then be used to further improve health services in the area.

The project aims to build and strengthen partnerships with a range of organisations, as well as to find out what really matters to patients.

NHS East London and the City is the first trust to trial this scheme and national patient champion Ashley Brooks will be on hand to support the volunteers throughout. He said: "There are many patients' groups, forums and charities, some organised by the NHS and others that are independent.

"An issue these groups face is the opportunity to feed back positive messages and influence the NHS. The LPC role is a unique way of helping these conversations have a platform that is currently hard to find."

Caroline Alexander, from

NHS East London and the City added: "The NHS in East London is dedicated to putting patients' views at the heart of everything we do."

The champions are expected to take up their role by next February.

Free flu jab for the vulnerable

RESIDENTS at risk of developing complications from seasonal flu are being urged to take advantage of a free jab.

The vaccine is available to the over 65s, pregnant women, carers, those living in residential or nursing homes, people working in frontline health or social care, and those with long-term health problems.

Individuals who have conditions such as respiratory, neurological, heart, kidney or liver diseases are particularly vulnerable.

Seasonal flu peaks every year, usually between September and February but GPs in Hackney are already seeing high numbers of people consulting them with flu-like symptoms. These include fever, chills, headaches and aching muscles. Flu is caused by viruses and not bacteria so antibiotics don't work. The most likely viruses that cause flu each year are identified in advance and vaccines are then produced to fight them.

Seasonal flu claims around 8,000 lives a year in England and Wales.

AIDS charity launches confidential on-line service

THE Terrence Higgins Trust has created an online support service for people living with HIV.

'MyHIV' offers confidential text and video support, one-to-one and group advice, accredited information and online tools to help people manage their condition. So far, more than 2,000 users have registered on the site, discussing issues such as the experience of being newly diagnosed, treatment options and disclosing HIV status to partners.

The site's new action group also aims to influence HIV policy in the UK and explore ways to promote awareness and reduce the potential stigma around the syndrome. The Elton John AIDS Foundation built the site alongside the HIV and sexual health charity.

Around 69,000 people are diagnosed with HIV and accessing care in the UK. It is now the nation's fastest-growing incurable health condition, according to the trust.

Hospice in hairdresser appeal

ST JOSEPH'S Hospice is on the hunt for a volunteer hairdresser to cater for its female patients.

The Mare Street hospice – which already offers manicures and complementary therapists – wants to also provide a hairdressing service half a day a week. This could be run by an individual or group of people, from a salon for example, sharing the commitment.

Jodie Bacon, staff nurse at St Joseph's, said: "So many of my patients on the ward have said what they'd really like more than anything else is a nice hairdo. It really can make such a difference to them emotionally.

"Imagine how you feel when you've had a hair do, then multiply it by 100 and you'll have an idea how it feels for a lady who's terminally ill and has just got her hair back after chemotherapy."

Clockwise from above: a portrait of the 'Gunpowder Plot' conspirators, including the most infamous, Guy Fawkes; extract of a map showing Hoxton c.1605; copy of Monteaule's letter; a cartoon depicting the letter being delivered to Sir Robert Cecil; a portrait of Monteaule (inset)

The plot thickens

ON 26 October 1605, an anonymous letter was received in Hoxton that warned of one of the most famous conspiracies in British history.

William Parker, 4th Baron Monteagle, 11th Baron Morley (1575-1622) was dining at a house owned by his brother-in-law Francis Tresham, when a servant handed him a letter given to him in the street by 'an unknown man of a reasonable tall personage'.

Monteaule opened the letter, but claimed he could not understand it, so handed it to his secretary Thomas Ward to read out loud. The contents were shocking, advising Monteagle to excuse himself from the opening of Parliament by King James I on 5 November, as those who attended 'shall receyue a terrible blowe... and yet they shall not sei who hurts them.'

The author told Monteagle to burn the letter but, instead, he rode immediately to Whitehall to alert Sir Robert Cecil, the king's chief minister. Cecil ordered a thorough search of the Houses of Parliament and found a store of gunpowder guarded by one of the plotters, Guy Fawkes, in the cellars. Soon the rest of the plotters were rounded up and either killed while resisting arrest or executed for treason.

The plot had been hatched by Catholics unhappy that the Protestant king was not as tolerant towards their religion as they had hoped. They planned to blow up the House of Lords, kill the king and replace him with a monarch of their own choice by marrying James I's daughter Elizabeth to a Catholic nobleman.

But was the story of Monteagle and the letter so simple? Monteagle and Tresham were devout Catholics who had both been involved in an earlier plot to remove Elizabeth I from power, so Monteagle's loyalty to the crown was far from certain. His presence in Hoxton that evening was totally unexpected – he had not visited the house for several weeks – so how did the messenger know where to find him?

More suspicious is the fact that Thomas Ward was a friend of Robert Wintour, one of the conspirators. Did Monteagle know of the letter's contents and ask Ward to read it aloud in order to warn him of the imminent unmasking of the plot?

There is some speculation that Monteagle wrote the letter himself in order to gain favour with the king. There is also a possibility the letter was sent by Francis Tresham to warn his brother-in-law, as Tresham was, in fact, one of the plotters, the last to have been recruited. He did not flee when the plot was uncovered, but stayed in London and was arrested and imprisoned in the Tower of London where he died on 23 December.

He denied being an active member of the conspiracy, only in concealing it.

It has even been suggested there was no plot, but that it was invented by Robert Cecil to further discredit Catholics and thus force the king to impose harsher measures upon them. If this was the plan, it worked. In 1606, Catholics were made to swear an Oath of Allegiance which affirmed James' authority over that of the Pope. Many theories have been proposed as to who was the author of the letter, but no one has ever been reliably identified.

Monteaule's true role in the discovery of the conspiracy will probably never be known either, but Francis Tresham's home in Hoxton played a pivotal role in the events leading to its exposure.

The house has long since disappeared, but it stood on what is now the junction of Myrtle Walk and Hoxton Street. This local connection to the Gunpowder Plot is marked by a brown plaque on the side of flats at 244-278 Crondall Street.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see. Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

The Mayor

Jules Pipe

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough. The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of the Council who is elected annually from the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Susan Fajana-Thomas.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Hoxton Apprentice

www.hoxtonapprentice.com

HAVING been unemployed since last February, Ed Jack was offered a trainee chef placement at the Hoxton Apprentice. Ed was made redundant from a job in a guitar shop, and found it difficult to find work as a professional musician. He also tried the retail sector without success. After recommendations from friends and family regarding his cooking abilities, he decided to develop his natural culinary skills into a tangible career opportunity. The Hoxton Apprentice is now helping him on his new journey in catering and to support his ambition to become a fully qualified chef. Ed is currently responsible for helping prepare meals as well as being supported to achieve a NVQ Level 2 in professional cookery.

Pannacotta

Serves 8

Preparation time
5 mins

Cooking time
10 mins

Ingredients

For a single batch:

- 750 ml double cream
- 250 ml full fat milk
- 125 ml granulated sugar
- 3½ gelatine leaves
- 1 split vanilla bean pod

Method

- Get all of your equipment together, including a tray of ramekins
- Separate the gelatine sheets carefully to make sure you have the exact amount
- Place gelatine into a bowl of cold water to soften
- Use a large saucepan or pot (whatever you use it must be large)

- Measure all ingredients accurately and place the milk, cream, sugar and vanilla beans into the pot and bring to the boil (pannacotta will not set if measurements are not accurate)
- Keep an eye on the mixture as it boils over quite quickly once it has reached temperature
- Once brought to the boil, remove from heat
- Squeeze excess liquid from the soaking gelatine sheets, add them to the cream mixture and whisk until dissolved
- Cool the mixture by sitting the pan in a sink of iced water
- Strain through a conical sieve to remove beans, then pour into bowls
- Individually wrap and date before moving them to the fridge to cool until set

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain a NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people. If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Ben Anderson on: 020 7749 2800.

The way ahead

RESIDENTS have been invited to comment on plans for the future use of the Olympic Park.

After London 2012, the site is set to be transformed into five neighbourhoods, located around a major new public space, the Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.

Much of it will be in Hackney – returning land that was used for the Games back to green space – and will include community facilities and venues such as the 2012 Press and Broadcast Centres and the multi-use games arena.

Residents are being asked for their opinions on the planning application for the park's redevelopment, known as the Legacy Communities Scheme,

New green space

submitted by the Olympic Park Legacy Company.

The consultation takes place until 14 November.
